

Worksheet 4 Year 3 27.4.20 Grammar

Read this part of a story. Underline questions in pink. Underline statements in orange. Underline exclamations in green. Underline commands in blue.

006 and a Bit

Daisy has made up her mind. She wasn't going to be a girl any more. What a great spy! She had drawn a spy's moustache on her top lip with a black felt-tip pen. She had found some dark glasses in a drawer and some secret spy gadgets in her mum's bedroom. She got ready. All she had to do now was speak in code.

Daisy frowned mysteriously and crept unseen into the kitchen. The kitchen was busy.

"Hello, Daisy," said Mum. "What do you want for tea tonight?"

"Make the ostriches swim in tomato sauce this evening," said Daisy. (Which, as any spy knows, means "a big portion of chicken nuggets and lots of ketchup, please!")

"Why are you speaking in silly words?" asked Daisy's mum.

"They're not silly words!" replied Daisy mysteriously. "It's a secret spy language. And my name isn't Daisy any more. It's 006 and a Bit."

006 and a Bit slipped invisibly into the back garden.

"Hello Daisy," said her neighbour, "how are you today?"

"Good afternoon, Agent Goldfish," said Daisy. "Are your fins green or purple today?"

Mrs Pike stared strangely at Daisy and went to mow her grass. She muttered "How funny!"

Now count each type of sentence:

Commands =

Statements =

Questions =

Exclamations =

Now have a go at writing your own command, statement, exclamation and question using the correct punctuation...
